Workshop Choices

a. Writing for publication Room 309

Karen Holland – Editor and Chief Nurse Education in Practice

This workshop will give you the opportunity to work alongside an editor of a leading nurse education journal to discuss the process of writing for publication. This will include identifying appropriate topics, situating in the wider literature and presenting your work in line with your chosen publication. Participants are invited to bring ideas for publications which may include your dissertation, an innovation from practice or a critical account of a clinical/ educational experience.

b. Creating opportunities for clinical academic careers Room 308

This workshop will enable the opportunity to hear about pathways available to support people who are interested in developing research alongside their clinical practice supported by Health Education England. Current PhD students who are pursuing clinical academic careers will share their experiences. Participants are invited to ask the panel questions and promote discussion.

Chetna Modi – Health Education England

PhD Students:

Kate Kirk

Charlotte Overton

Emily Gartshore

c. Advanced nursing practice Room 307

This workshop will be facilitated by the current course director of the Masters in Advanced Practice at the University of Nottingham. Insights will be given into the nature and content including non-medical prescribing. Participants will also have opportunity to hear from nursing working in a range of advanced roles across the fields of practice. Participants are invited to ask the panel questions and promote discussion.
